

Solar Annex and Commerce Commons Underway

With the touch of a pen on official documents in Lake Buena Vista Wednesday and the roar of a bulldozer at the Central Energy Plant last Friday, two significant steps were taken toward the realization of several elements in our EPCOT master plan for Walt Disney World's future.

Both are significant, in that one introduces a new direction in Lake Buena Vista, that of the construction of an office park complex for industry and commerce to utilize; while the other is a new direction in energy, the converting of the sun's rays to perform functions previously generated by fossil fuels.

WE'LL CALL IT "COMMERCE COMMONS"...

Plans for the development of Lake Buena Vista Commerce Commons office park were jointly announced Wednesday by Walt Disney Productions President Card Walker and Donald Love, President of Oxford Properties U.S., Ltd. Our company has selected Oxford Properties to develop Commerce Commons on a 50-acre site in Lake Buena Vista, bordering I-4. The ultimate plan calls for a series of buildings with up to two-million square feet of space for industry and commerce to utilize, to be constructed in stages as demand warrants.

Phase I of the project will be a five-story building of approximately 100,000 square feet of office space. And in an additional agreement, Sun First National Bank of Orlando will become our first and primary tenant in it.

The building will feature a park-like entrance. It will be enclosed at the top with skylights and balconies facing inward at

Examining a solar collector unit which was installed on the roof of the Central Energy Plant several months back for testing purposes, are (l-r) Bernard Fine, President of United Industrial Corporation (parent company supplying collectors); Disney Ambassador Debbie Bennett; Win Barr, Vice President of AAI Corporation (company building solar collectors); Dr. Howard Harrenstien, Assistant to the Director of ERDA; and Tom Jones, Director of Reedy Creek Utilities Company.

BILLY CARTER TAPING HERE

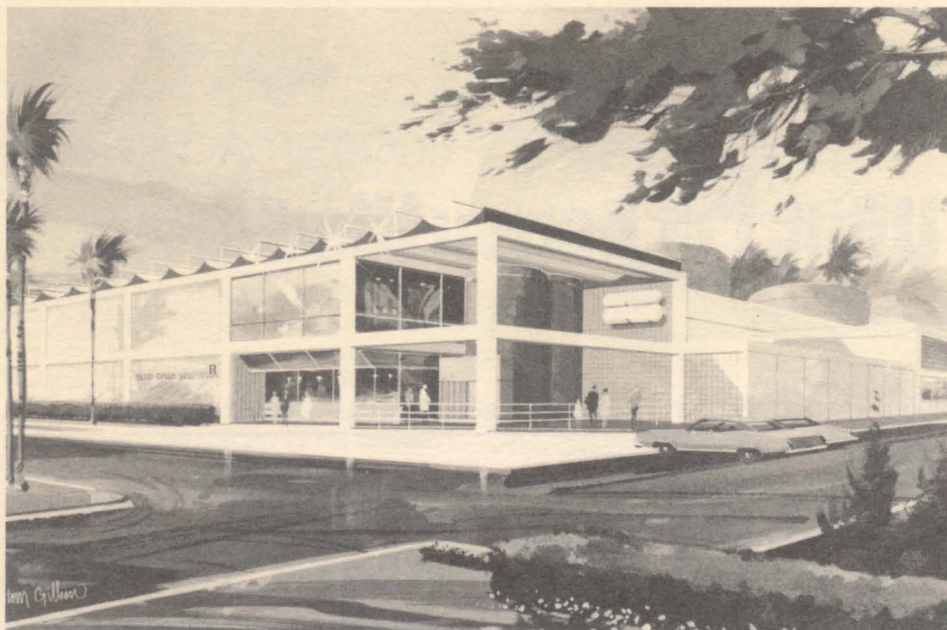

Billy Carter, that "good ol' boy" from Plains, Georgia and the rather flamboyant brother of President Jimmy Carter, will be Phil Donahue's guest when he brings his show to the Village in Lake Buena Vista this Monday, February 27. And you can be there to taste Billy's recipe of country humor, folklore and idioms.

The President summed up all that Billy is when he introduced himself at a banquet recently as . . . "I'm Jimmy Carter, Billy Carter's brother."

The Phil Donahue Show taping will last from 11 am til 12 noon Monday. There will be seating for 600 out front, however, there are no tickets left. But cast members and guests are invited to watch the show in standing areas around the seated audience. Admission is free.

At this writing, Billy Carter is Phil's only guest, but negotiations are going on for several more.

Just be there a few minutes before 11 am if you want to participate.

This is an artist's vision of how the new solar-powered Central Energy Plant annex will look. Notice how the collectors actually become the roof.

each level, similar in concept to the Contemporary Resort. The exterior of the building will be composed of reflecting glass, designed to maximize energy conservation while taking full advantage of the surrounding park-like landscape.

The building will be one of several in the master plan, to be built on a rectangular site in Lake Buena Vista, with approximately 3,000 feet of frontage along I-4. Phase I will utilize approximately five and one-half acres of land for the building and a nearby parking garage. Construction will begin immediately.

WE'LL USE HEAT TO COOL...

With a blast on a solar-powered steam whistle and the roar of a digging bulldozer, a prototype solar-powered office annex to our Central Energy Plant got underway last Friday. Solar energy will power an estimated 100% of the office building's heating and hot water, and 80% of the building's air conditioning needs.

Reedy Creek Utility Companies (RCUC) Director Tom Jones explained that the project "culminates some three years of planning, research and testing. The concept is in keeping with Walt Disney's expressed philosophy for EPCOT . . . the prototype demonstration of innovative systems, proving their viability, and showing people how these systems contribute to tomorrow's world."

The solar energy annex "represents, in miniature, how we intend to approach EPCOT in cooperation with industry and government," Tom went on to say.

The Energy Research & Development Administration (ERDA) of the federal government awarded Walt Disney World a $344,000 grant for the project. The federal funding will be used only for the solar portion of the building, with the system's operation being monitored by telemetry equipment; sending data every five-minutes to NASA's Marshall Flight Center where it will be analyzed and used in comparison with other solar experimental systems.

OUR DESIGN CONCEPT IS UNIQUE...

Using solar power is not a new concept. Many companies offer "home" models in the market place. But each has one common denominator . . . they are prohibitively expensive. The Central Energy Plant annex's design concept is unique, however, in that its 16 solar energy collectors will become the roof itself, instead of just sitting on the roof as conventional collectors do.

Linked together across the top of the annex, our 16 collectors will eliminate the usual steel trusses, corrugated decking and insulating concrete of conventional roofs. Thus, they will lower the overall cost of the building, making the solar installation more economically favorable.

Each of the 8-foot wide by 32-foot long solar collectors will consist of a concave cylindrical reflective surface and heat absorber unit. The absorber will concentrate heat reflected on it from the collector's reflective surface to heat water, which is used as a transfer medium.

The heated water is circulated by pump to storage tanks below for use in heating, cooling and hot water needs. Ten-thousand gallon storage tanks for both hot and cold water are features of our system.

In keeping with the EPCOT philosophy of showcasing new and innovative systems for people to learn from, the annex's essential solar collection parts will be marked using color coding and made easily visible from the exterior of the structure for viewing.

The new solar-powered building is expected to be operational by August of 1977.

This is a model of the Phase I building of Commerce Commons as it will look when finished.

LETTERS

To all My Friends:

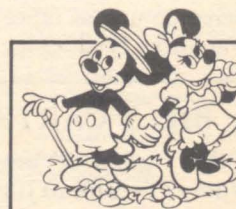

I want to thank each and every one of you for your thoughts, calls, flowers and cards over the past couple of months while I was in the hospital. I'm home now feeling much better and hope to be back visiting my "home-away-from-home" soon.

Millard Jones

To The Cast:

Your kind expression of sympathy will always be held in grateful remembrance by our family.

WITHIN OUR FAMILY

Your family, neighbors and friends can have the opportunity to make some extra money and have a fun job at the same time. All types of positions are available during the Magic Kingdom's extended hours, April 2 through 16.

Just tell them to visit the Casting Department now and interview for a part-time position. Casting is open Monday through Saturday, 9 am to 4 pm.

Last week, EYES & EARS paid a pictorial visit to our Central Reservations Office (CRO) and the Telephone Communications Center. But that was only half the picture; besides calling Walt Disney World, many of our guests write. And they write, and write, and write. The hosts and hostesses charged with guest correspondence work in two areas . . . Mail & Communications and Guest Information Letters. And do they ever receive letters! Mail & Communications receives an average of 2,500 letters a day requesting reservations, sending in deposits and asking questions. Next door, Guest Information Letters handles general questions, requests for specific information and letters from children to our Disney characters. Last year, they responded to 106,000 letters! But then that's all in a day's work for these communicators.

Lee Widmer and Donna Richmond make their home in Mail & Communications.

Barbara Mathews (sitting), Marcy Avery and Katha Endress respond back to guests inquiring about reservations in Mail & Communications.

When the letter is addressed to Mickey Mouse, you can bet one of these hostesses will get it! Staffing the Guest Information Letters area are (sitting) Hannalore Stone, Sue Hudson and Cathy Pierce.

Receiving an average of 2,500 letters a day are Mail & Communications hostesses Vickie Wheeler, Joan Galant, Colleen Chaney and Marianne Raver.

Several weeks ago, EYES & EARS carried a plea for blood donations at the Central Florida Blood Bank for Lake Buena Vista cast member Jeanette Swan. Her father, Ray Dittenber of Lake Buena Vista, stopped by our offices this week with the sad news that Jeanette passed away this past Saturday. However, he asked us to pass on his sincere thanks to all who donated blood and sent flowers. Our most sincere condolences go out to the family and friends of Jeanette.

During the current transition period, the Group Insurance Office hopes to maintain a relatively normal routine, however, some delays in claims processing may result. If you have submitted a claim that requires immediate attention, contact the Group Insurance Office at extension 4731 and every effort will be made to expedite the claim. Otherwise, please be patient while your claim is processed.

harbors, villages and markets; walking miles of sandy beaches, sand the colors of white, pink and black; snorkeling in the clear Caribbean waters . . . your evenings again visiting the islands and returning to "The Polynesia" for grub and grog while you mull over new words you learned that day in French, British and Dutch accents.

So, with this in mind, Cast Activities is again inviting any and all cast members interested in a four-way marathon run between Sea World, Stars Hall of Fame, Circus World and Walt Disney World to participate in the upcoming event! Practice sessions are now going on every Saturday at Little Lake Bryan. The locker rooms there are open from 11 am til dusk . . . and you're invited to drop by.
